

How Discrimination And Disparities Impact Children And Teens: Research On Ethnicity, Social Class, And Sexual Orientation

Speakers

Stacey S. Horn, Ph.D., University of Illinois-Chicago
“Developmental and Contextual Factors Related to Sexual Prejudice Across Adolescence”

Rashmita S. Mistry, Ph.D., UCLA
“Exploring Social Class Identity in Childhood and Adolescence: What, How, and Why?”

Tiffany Yip, Ph.D., Fordham University
“The Opportunities and Challenge of Moving towards Diversity: Discrimination, Sleep & Identity”

Followed by responses by UK Faculty:
Sherry Rostosky, Ph.D., Counseling Psychology
Jazmin Brown-Iannuzzi, Ph.D., Psychology

Friday, February 9
1:00pm-4:00pm
Kincaid Auditorium
Reception to follow in Woodward Hall

Stacey S. Horn, Ph.D.,
University of Illinois-Chicago

Rashmita S. Mistry, Ph.D.,
UCLA

Tiffany Yip, Ph.D.,
Fordham University

Her research focuses on issues of sexual prejudice and bias-motivated harassment among adolescents, adolescents’ reasoning about peer harassment, as well as LGBT students’ experiences in schools and communities.

Her research focuses on consequences of poverty and economic stress on child and family well-being, young children’s reasoning about social class and economic inequality, and children’s social identity development.

Her research focuses on ethnic identity development among minority youth, young adults, and adults; direct and indirect association between ethnic identity and psychological adjustment; and the impact of ethnic-specific and general stressors for well-being outcomes.